A BIGGER SPLIT ON ZERO DEALS PAYS ZERO.

The real question isn't what percentage you keep.
It's how many deals you actually close.

ASK AGENTS WHY THEY SWITCHED BROKERAGES AND MOST SAY THE SPLIT. ASK IF THE SPLIT MADE THEM CLOSE MORE DEALS, AND ALMOST NONE SAY YES.

The number on the offer sheet and the number that grows your business are not the same number.

THE SPLIT IS THE EASIEST NUMBER TO COMPARE. IT'S ALSO THE ONE THAT MOVES THE LEAST.

Two agents on the exact same 70/30 split can have completely different years, because the split doesn't generate a lead, train a script, or follow up with a client. It just divides whatever already landed. The number that actually matters is how many extra transactions a brokerage's training, systems, and support put in front of you this year, not the number printed on your commission statement.

WHAT TO ASK BEFORE YOU COMPARE SPLITS:

1 Ask what it does, not just what it pays.
Before comparing percentages, ask exactly what training, leads, or systems come attached to that number.

2 Count last year's actual leads from your brokerage.
Not promised, not available on a portal you never open. The number that reached your phone.

3 Price the split against production, not against itself.
A 60/40 split that hands you ten extra closings beats an 80/20 split that hands you none.

THE TAKEAWAY

HERE'S WHAT YOU DO NOW.

Ask your broker this week how many real leads their systems put in front of you last year. Then decide if the split is the number that matters, or just the easiest one to compare.
