INSIDE THE INDUSTRY

SHOWING FOUR. NO OFFER. SELLER PANICS.

Top agents say that call is way too early.

IT TAKES LONGER THAN FOUR SHOWINGS TO GET AN OFFER IN TODAY'S MARKET.

A survey of top agents puts the real number at fourteen.

03 / 05

14 SHOWINGS, NOT 4, IS THE NUMBER THAT MATTERS.

HomeLight surveyed 859 top agents for its 2026 housing market outlook, fielded December 2-9, 2025. Nationwide, those agents reported it takes an average of 14 showings to sell a house in the current market, and that held even in the Northeast, the only region agents called a seller's market. Four quiet showings is not a signal. It is the first third of a normal market.

WHAT TO AGREE ON BEFORE THE SIGN GOES UP:

1 Set the price checkpoint at the listing meeting.
Tell the seller up front: "We'll judge the price at showing fourteen, not showing four."

2 Name the number before the panic call.
A seller who already knows fourteen is average does not spiral after four.

3 This isn't "never cut the price."
The same agents told HomeLight that 57 percent favor pricing slightly below market to drive offers in 2026. The checkpoint is about timing, not about holding a number too long.

THE TAKEAWAY

JUDGE THE PRICE AT SHOWING FOURTEEN, NOT SHOWING FOUR.

Agree on the number before the sign goes in the yard, and the panic call never happens.
