REDFIN JUST MEASURED 50 OF THE BIGGEST U.S. HOUSING MARKETS. ONLY 3 STILL FAVOR SELLERS.

Nationwide, sellers now outnumber buyers by 70.5% , the largest gap Redfin has recorded since it started tracking this in 2013.

CHICAGO ISN'T ACTUALLY ONE OF THE 41.

41 of the 50 metros Redfin measured are buyer's markets. Chicago isn't one of them -- it's one of just 6 metros sitting balanced, with sellers outnumbering buyers by 8.1%, inside Redfin's own plus-or-minus-10% band for balanced. The national headline and the Chicago conversation are two different numbers. An agent who quotes the national one to a local seller is arguing with the wrong data.

WHAT TO DO WITH THIS BEFORE YOUR NEXT LISTING APPOINTMENT:

1 Pull your own metro's number, not the national one.

Redfin publishes buyer's/seller's status city by city. Know whether your market is balanced, buyer's, or seller's before you walk into the appointment.

2 Use "balanced" as the actual pitch to a Chicago seller.

Balanced means real competition for well-priced listings still exists here, even while most of the country has tipped to buyers. That's a stronger, more honest case than either extreme.

3 Tell nervous buyers the plain math.

Nationally, sellers outnumber buyers by 70.5%, the biggest gap on record. A buyer who feels like they're losing is working from the wrong year's market.

THE TAKEAWAY

HERE'S WHAT YOU DO NOW.

Before your next appointment, look up whether your own metro is balanced, buyer's, or seller's. Bring that number, not the national headline.
