

INSIDE THE INDUSTRY

1,534,918 HOMES FOR SALE. MOST SINCE 2020.

Your seller still thinks it's a bidding war market.

THREE IN FIVE HOMES SOLD
UNDER ASKING
PRICE LAST MONTH.

Not a downturn. Just more choices for the buyer sitting across the table.

SUPPLY CAME BACK. MOST PRICING CONVERSATIONS DIDN'T.

Redfin's August 2026 data: total homes for sale rose 3.9 percent month over month to 1,534,918, the highest level since 2020. New listings climbed 4.3 percent year over year to 393,178. With more homes competing for the same buyers, 59.5 percent sold below their original asking price, and the average sale-to-list ratio slipped to 96.4 percent. A seller priced against last year's tighter market, working with an agent still running last year's script, is walking into a number the data no longer backs up.

BRING THIS TO THE NEXT LISTING APPOINTMENT:

- 1 Open with the supply number, not the comp sheet.

"Total inventory just hit its highest point since 2020. That changes what 'priced right' means this month."
- 2 Set the asking-price expectation before an offer does it for you.

"Almost three in five homes sold under asking last month. A number below list isn't a rejection, it's the market."
- 3 Price to this month's ratio, not last year's.

The average home is closing at 96.4 percent of list. Build that number into the CMA conversation, not just the closing-day one.

THE TAKEAWAY

THE MARKET HANDED BUYERS LEVERAGE BACK. SAY SO BEFORE A LOWBALL OFFER DOES.

The seller who hears the number from you first still trusts you at the counter.
