MORE LISTINGS HIT THE MARKET. DEMAND DIDN'T MOVE.

New listings rose 2.1 percent in four weeks, the fastest pace since August 2022.

THE MARKET DIDN'T SLOW DOWN. IT GOT MORE CROWDED.

New listings of U.S. homes for sale rose 2.1 percent week over week on a seasonally adjusted basis for the four weeks ending August 30, 2026, according to Redfin, the highest level since August 2022. Total homes for sale grew far slower, up just 0.4 percent in the same window, and buyer demand stayed flat. That gap is the story: every new listing this month is landing in front of buyers who already have more to compare it against than they did in July.

WHAT CHANGES AT YOUR NEXT LISTING APPOINTMENT:

- 1 Pull the current active competition before you talk price, not last month's comps.
Show the seller exactly what else is on the market in their band right now.
- 2 Price to the week you're listing in.
Fresh supply is moving fast, and a price set for July's competition is already out of date.
- 3 Get it showing-ready before the sign goes up.
A buyer with more options skips the listing that still needs imagination.

THE TAKEAWAY

MORE LISTINGS DOESN'T MEAN LESS BUSINESS.

It means the prepared listing is the one that still moves.
