

KEEPING IT REAL

HIS BILLION-DOLLAR TEAM STARTED AT $40,000.

Chris Wands corrected his own rookie-year story, live, on air.

D.J. Paris
Keeping It Real Podcast

KEEPING IT REAL

keepingitrealpod.com

“

"IT WAS ABOUT
FIVE SALES AND THIRTY-PLUS
RENTALS."

Miami luxury producer Chris Wands, correcting the host's version of his own first year.

THE BIO SAYS $55 MILLION. THE ROOKIE YEAR SAID $40,000.

D.J. introduced Chris Wands by his record $55 million sale and a first year of "35 properties." Chris stopped him. "I want to correct you on one thing," he said. "It was 35 transactions, not 35 sales... about five sales and 30-plus rentals... I think I made like $40,000 that year." The polished version of a career skips the part that actually built it. His was mostly rentals worth a few hundred dollars in commission each, at a time he says he "talked to everyone" and "talked to the wall if I could" just to make himself useful.

WHAT CHRIS WANDS TELLS AGENTS STUCK ON SMALL COMMISSIONS:

1 Take the $1,000 rental.

"What is a thousand dollars versus not? It's still a thousand dollars," he said, when asked what he'd tell someone disheartened by a small check.

2 Don't skip it because you're "too busy."

He pointed at agents who claim they have no time, then won't work a $1,000 rental someone hands them.

3 Expect it to compound, not pay off immediately.

His own words: "that $1,000 rental could lead you to the $20,000 rental, which can lead you to the $20,000 buyer."

THE TAKEAWAY

THE $40,000 YEAR WASN'T THE FAILURE.

It was the part of the story he now corrects people to make sure they hear.

D.J. Paris
Keeping It Real Podcast

KEEPING IT REAL

keepingitrealpod.com