

KALE REALTY

EVERY MERGER SAYS NOTHING IS CHANGING FOR YOU.

Your contract terms are telling a different story.

THE SPLIT YOU SIGNED UP FOR MIGHT NOT BE THE
ONE YOU HAVE NOW.

Big acquisitions are quietly resetting agent contracts, one company at a time.

THERE'S NO INDUSTRY STANDARD LEFT TO CHECK YOUR CONTRACT AGAINST.

A wave of consolidation, Redfin's tie-up with Rocket and Real's acquisition of RE/MAX among the named examples, means a handful of companies now set the pace for what agent contracts look like, per RISMedia's September 2026 industry review. Redfin is pushing a pseudo-employee model with retirement plans and health insurance layered onto traditional pay. Real is leaning into revenue share and its own in-house financial platform. Splits, fees, and terms already vary office to office, and every one of these deals ships with the same line to agents: nothing is changing. The terms usually do.

THE SWAP, BEFORE YOUR BROKERAGE'S NEXT ANNOUNCEMENT:

- 1 Don't take "nothing is changing" at face value during a merger or acquisition.

That line gets said every time, and contract terms still move underneath it.

- 2 Do read your independent contractor agreement this week.

Find every clause triggered by a change of ownership or corporate restructuring before someone else decides what it means for you.

- 3 Do know your real number on a flat fee before you compare offers.

A split brokerage's percentage means less than what actually lands in your account.

THE TAKEAWAY

KNOW YOUR CONTRACT BEFORE YOUR BROKERAGE'S NEXT DEAL DOES.

A flat fee means the math doesn't move when a merger happens.
