

KEEPING IT REAL

CHRIS WANDS TREATS EVERY DEAL THE SAME.

A $1,500 rental gets the same effort as a $55 million sale.

D.J. Paris
Keeping It Real Podcast

KEEPING IT REAL

keepingitrealpod.com

“

"IF YOU DO GOOD ENOUGH ON YOUR JOB, MONEY WILL BECOME A BYPRODUCT OF IT."

Miami producer Chris Wands says that about a $1,500 rental the same way he says it about a $55 million sale.

EVERY RENTER IS A FUTURE BUYER, IF YOU DON'T TREAT THEM LIKE A DISCOUNT CLIENT.

On Keeping It Real, Chris Wands, whose team ranks fourth nationally for rental transactions, put it this way: "a $500,000 transaction, a $1,500 rental, or a $55 million transaction, I personally treat everyone the same." He is not describing being polite. He is describing where his buyers come from. "If you do good enough on your job, money will become a byproduct of it," he said. The rental you write off as too small to matter is the buyer conversation you are handing to whoever answers the phone next.

THE SYSTEM THAT KEEPS THE SMALL DEAL FROM DISAPPEARING:

- 1 Set a notification the day you close a rental.
Chris logs one for sixty days before that lease renews, so the follow-up never depends on memory.
- 2 Call thirty days after move-in, just to check in.
"How's the apartment going? Are you still happy there?" No pitch. Just contact.
- 3 Call again sixty days before the lease ends.
That's when a renter who is ready to buy starts looking, whether you reach out or not.

THE TAKEAWAY

THE $1,500 RENTAL WAS NEVER THE DEAL.

The relationship you build doing it right is.

D.J. Paris
Keeping It Real Podcast

KEEPING IT REAL

keepingitreallpod.com