

KALE REALTY

STOP SAYING "WE NEED TO TALK PRICE."

Say this instead, and your seller stops defending a number.

“

HOMES THAT CLOSE AT WEEK
FOUR SELL 1.8%
BETTER AGAINST ASKING THAN AVERAGE.

The ones still sitting at week eighteen close 1.3% below. Realtor.com, June 2026.

THE WRONG SENTENCE TURNS A DEADLINE INTO AN ARGUMENT.

Most agents open the day-thirty call with "we need to talk about the price." The seller hears you quitting and starts defending a number that was never the actual problem.

Realtor.com's June 2026 analysis, from senior economist Joel Berner, found homes that close around the four-week mark sell 1.8 percent better against asking than the average sale in the same period. Homes still sitting at eighteen weeks close below expectations. A calendar deadline does the work an opinion can't. Nobody has to admit they were wrong.

SAY THIS INSTEAD, WORD FOR WORD:

- 1 Open with the number, not your opinion.
"Realtor.com ran the numbers. Homes that close at four weeks do 1.8 percent better against asking than average. At eighteen weeks, worse."
- 2 Name the exact week you're in.
"We're at week four. I'd rather move while we still pick the number."
- 3 Make the call today.
Find the listing on your desk closest to day thirty and have this conversation before week six, not after.

THE TAKEAWAY

DAY THIRTY ISN'T WHEN YOU LOSE THE LISTING.

It's the last week you get to choose.