

KEEPING IT REAL

85% OF AGENTS NEVER CALL A PAST CLIENT.

A Chicago team leader says that's the whole opportunity.

D.J. Paris
Keeping It Real Podcast

KEEPING IT REAL

keepingitrealpod.com

“

"THEY ALREADY HAVE AN AGENT" IS NOT THE OBJECTION YOU THINK IT IS.

Ben Lalez, Ben Lalez Team, Chicago. Several hundred million dollars a year in production.

MOST AGENTS AREN'T LOSING TO A BETTER AGENT. THEY'RE LOSING TO SILENCE.

Ben's point on Keeping It Real: nearly everyone a Realtor talks to already has an agent, so most agents hear that and move on. But 85% of agents never contact their client again after the sale, which means "already has an agent" and "has nobody actually checking in" are usually the same person. Ben told a story about a stranger at an event who couldn't even remember the name of the agent who sold them their home. The job isn't beating that agent on a pitch. It's being the one still there when the other one went quiet.

WHAT BEN DOES INSTEAD:

1 Pull your last 10 closed deals and trace each one back to the real source.
Not "referral." The specific person and the specific moment it started.

2 Write down the 15 things you did this year that actually led to a deal, and repeat only those for the next 90 days.
Most of what fills a calendar isn't on that list.

3 Say this to anyone who already has an agent:
"I'm glad you have somebody. I'd love to be your backup in case anything ever changes." Then stay in touch until it does.

THE TAKEAWAY

THE AGENT WHO STAYS IN TOUCH WINS THE CLIENT WHO'S ALREADY "TAKEN."

Follow-up is the whole game once the sale is done.

D.J. Paris
Keeping It Real Podcast

KEEPING IT REAL
keepingitrealpod.com