INSIDE THE INDUSTRY

YOU LISTED BEFORE THE PHOTOS WERE READY.

That decision alone can cost your seller real money.

THE FIRST TEN DAYS A LISTING IS LIVE LARGELY DECIDE ITS FINAL SALE PRICE.

Not the open house. Not the second price cut. The first ten days.

A WEAK ONLINE LAUNCH COSTS TOURS BEFORE IT COSTS DOLLARS.

Chase Whitney of The Whitney Team in Orange County says the first 7 to 10 days on market largely set the price, because a weak online presentation reduces tours, offers, and leverage before most buyers ever book a showing. By the time an agent "fixes" the photos on day twelve, the buyers who would have toured in week one have already moved on to the next listing.

WHAT YOU DO DIFFERENTLY THIS MONTH:

1 Finish the photos before you go live.
A thin or rushed photo set is the first showing most buyers get, and most never book a second one.

2 Write the full description before the listing is public.
An unfinished write-up reads as unfinished work to a buyer scrolling fast.

3 Know the real cost of skipping this.
Whitney puts the swing at two to three percent. On a $1.1 million home, that is twenty-two to thirty-three thousand dollars.

4 Treat day one as the best version of the listing
, not a placeholder you plan to fix later.

THE TAKEAWAY

HOLD THE LISTING ONE MORE DAY IF THE PHOTOS AREN'T FINISHED.

The first ten days don't get a second try.
