"THE AGENTS WITH A LOW RATIO LEAD THEIR CONVERSATIONS WITH QUESTIONS, SLOW THE PACE AND LISTEN FAR MORE THAN THEY SPEAK."

Kuvaal Patel, Director of Agent Development & Team Growth, Anderson Real Estate Group.

03 / 05

THE NUMBER THAT PREDICTS WHO BOOKS MORE ISN'T CALL VOLUME.

Patel's leading indicator is how many conversations it takes an agent to book one appointment. Agents with a high ratio "talk far too much, ask far too little and pitch their services before they understand how they can help the consumer." Agents with a low ratio do the opposite: they ask questions first, slow down, and let the other person talk.

WHAT YOU DO DIFFERENTLY ON YOUR NEXT CALL:

1 Open with a question, not your pitch.
Find out what they're trying to do before you say a word about yourself.

2 Slow your pace on purpose.
Patel's low-ratio agents talk less and listen more, not the other way around.

3 Track your own ratio.
Count how many conversations it takes you to book one appointment. That number predicts your close rate better than your call volume does.

4 Pitch last, not first.
Once you actually know what they need, the pitch writes itself.

THE TAKEAWAY

ON YOUR NEXT CALL, ASK BEFORE YOU PITCH.

Count your ratio this week. It's the number that actually predicts who books more.
