

KALE REALTY

YOU KEEP CALLING A TEXTER.

She reads every message. She thinks you went quiet.

“

SHE'S NOT IGNORING YOU.
SHE'S IGNORING THE VOICEMAIL.

Call the one channel a client never checks, and you both end up thinking the other one went cold.

YOU DIDN'T LOSE HER. YOU NEVER ASKED HER.

Leave voicemails for a client who only reads texts, and she never calls back. You decide she went cold. She didn't. She read every text and wondered why you disappeared. Neither of you did anything wrong. Nobody asked which channel the other one actually uses, so the relationship ran on a guess until it quietly stopped.

ASK THESE THREE QUESTIONS AT THE FIRST MEETING:

- 1 "Call, text, or email?"
Ask before you assume. Don't wait for a missed call to tell you.
- 2 "What hours are okay?"
Write the actual window down, not just the answer.
- 3 "Do you listen to voicemail, or should I skip it?"
Most people say skip it.
- 4 Write it in their contact record.
Not a sticky note. Somewhere you'll see it again.

THE TAKEAWAY

ASK THE THREE QUESTIONS, THEN
TALK TO THEM THE
WAY THEY ACTUALLY LISTEN.

Thirty seconds of questions. A whole deal's worth of less friction.