ONLY 6% SAY THEY'D BUY AT THIS RATE.

The other 94% just handed their competition the whole market.

PENDING SALES JUST FELL DOUBLE DIGITS.

Every buyer who sat this out is one less offer standing between your client and the house.

THE 94% CREATED THE OPENING THE 6% ARE USING.

Rates are sitting around 7.5%, and a survey from John Burns Research and Consulting found only 6% of homeowners and renters would accept a rate in that range. Compass Chief Economist Mike Simonsen says pending sales are down 10.5% from a year ago this week, and down 8.4% for all of September. Fewer buyers in the pool means fewer competing offers for the ones still shopping.

WHAT CHANGES THIS MONTH:

- 1 Tell qualified buyers the number that matters is the competition, not the rate.
A 7.5%
- 2 rate feels wrong. A thinner buyer pool is the actual opportunity.
- 3 Show sellers the pending-sales drop before they chase last year's price.
Ten percent
- 4 fewer contracts means last year's comps are already stale.
- 5 Run the payment, not the rate, in every buyer conversation.
A buyer who can carry the
- 6 payment this month doesn't need the rate to feel normal first.

THE TAKEAWAY

THE 6% AREN'T WAITING. WHY IS YOUR BUYER?

Less competition is the deal, while everyone else is busy hating the rate.
