THE HIGHEST PRICE ISN'T THE BEST PRICE.

It's the one that costs you three percent at closing.

EVERY WEEK YOUR LISTING SITS, IT LOSES LEVERAGE.

Homes that sell fast make more money than homes that sell eventually.

HERE'S THE THREE-POINT GAP NOBODY SHOWS THE SELLER.

Realtor.com tracked closed listings and found homes that sell at or before the four-week mark bring in 1.8% more than homes at the average 52-day pace. Homes still sitting at eighteen weeks sell for 1.3% less. That's a three-point spread between pricing it right on day one and pricing it to win the appointment. (Realtor.com, Senior Economist Joel Berner, 2026.)

DO THIS, NOT THAT, AT THE LISTING APPOINTMENT:

- 1 Don't quote the number that wins the appointment.
Quote the number the comps support,
- 2 even when another agent already promised more.
- 3 Do put the reduction schedule in the listing agreement on day one.
If the seller wants to
- 4 test a higher number anyway, the cut is already agreed to, not a fight in week six.
- 5 Do show the seller the three-point spread.
The agent who waits to cut isn't protecting
- 6 the price. They're spending it.

THE TAKEAWAY

PRICE IT LIKE WEEK FOUR, NOT WEEK EIGHTEEN.

That's the only number that actually shows up at closing.
