

INSIDE THE INDUSTRY

CHICAGO AGENTS. INVENTORY DIDN'T COME BACK.

It fell 28.9 percent, and your buyer doesn't know it.

3,338 HOMES FOR SALE IN THE CITY
OF CHICAGO.
DOWN FROM 4,693.

Your buyer thinks fall means more options. The count says the opposite.

YOUR BUYER ISN'T WRONG ABOUT THE CALENDAR. THEY'RE WRONG ABOUT THE MARKET.

The Chicago Association of REALTORS' June 2026 numbers, reported by Chicago Agent Magazine on July 27, 2026, put city inventory at 3,338 homes, down 28.9 percent from 4,693 a year earlier. The median Chicago sale price climbed 6.9 percent to $427,500 over the same period. A buyer waiting for fall listings to loosen the market is waiting on a shift that already went the other direction.

SAY THIS THE NEXT TIME A BUYER WANTS TO WAIT FOR FALL:

- 1 Lead with the count, not the calendar.
"Inventory in the city is down almost 29 percent from a year ago. Fall isn't opening things up."
- 2 Name the price move.
"The median sale price is still up almost 7 percent. Waiting hasn't been a discount play so far this year."
- 3 Put a cost on the wait.
"If the right house is in front of you now, waiting for more competition to show up isn't a plan."

THE TAKEAWAY

FALL DIDN'T BRING YOUR BUYER MORE
OPTIONS. IT BROUGHT FEWER.

Bring the inventory count to the next buyer consultation, not just the new listings.
