

KALE REALTY

STOP ASKING IF THEY'RE STILL LOOKING.

One swap turns a maybe-no into a real conversation.

“

"ARE YOU STILL LOOKING?" IS A
YES-OR-NO EXIT RAMP.

The easiest answer for a cold lead is the one that ends the call.

THE QUESTION ISN'T RUDE. IT'S JUST AN EASY DOOR OUT.

A closed yes/no question hands a cold lead a frictionless no, and the call ends before you learn anything about where they actually stand. Swap it for a question that assumes they're still in the process and needs a real answer: "I'm keeping an eye on the market for you. Has your timeline or price range shifted at all?" That question can't be answered in one word, so the lead has to actually think about where they are instead of reaching for the exit.

SAY THIS THE NEXT TIME YOU DIAL A COLD LEAD:

- 1 Don't ask "are you still looking?"
It's a yes/no question with a built-in exit, and most leads take it.
- 2 Ask about their timeline instead.
"Has your timeline or price range shifted since we last talked?" requires a real answer.
- 3 Reference something specific.
"I've been keeping an eye on [neighborhood or price range] for you" shows the lead you didn't forget them between calls.

THE TAKEAWAY

THE SWAP ISN'T
THE WORDS. IT'S
MAKING THE LEAD
ANSWER INSTEAD OF EXIT.

Pull five cold leads from your database tonight and try the new question on each one.
