6.67%. CALL YOUR LIST TODAY.

Rates just fell to a one-year low. Most agents will wait for a lower number nobody promised them.

"CALL ME WHEN RATES DROP"
ALMOST NEVER COMES WITH A NUMBER.

Rates dropped. The buyer who said that line is still waiting to hear from you.

THE BUYER ISN'T WAITING ON A RATE. THEY'RE WAITING ON YOU.

Freddie Mac's weekly survey put the 30-year fixed average at 6.67% as of August 19, 2026, the lowest reading in about a year, reported by The Mortgage Reports. The 10-year Treasury yield fell to 4.68% the same week. Most buyers who told you "call me when rates drop" never gave you a specific number to watch for, which means the decision about when to call was always yours, not theirs. The agent who calls today and says "this is the drop we talked about" owns that conversation. The agent who waits for a rounder number loses the buyer to whoever calls first.

THE LIST TO WORK TODAY:

1 Pull every buyer who mentioned rates in the last six months.

CRM notes, texts, voicemail follow-ups. The list is smaller than it feels.

2 Lead the call with the number, not the pitch.

"Freddie Mac's average just hit six sixty-seven, the lowest in about a year" is a fact, not a sales line.

3 Ask what payment they were waiting to see, not what rate.

Most buyers think in monthly payment. Translate 6.67% into their actual number before you hang up.

THE TAKEAWAY

THE RATE MOVED.
THAT'S YOUR
REASON TO CALL,
NOT THEIRS.

Nobody on your list is going to call you when a headline moves. You call them.
