

KEEPING IT REAL

HIS FLIP BUSINESS COLLAPSED IN 2022.

Two years later, starting from zero in a brand new market, he closed $510,000 in commission his first year. Here is exactly what he did.

D.J. Paris

Keeping It Real Podcast

KEEPING IT REAL

keepingitrealpod.com

“

"I COULD SELL A HOUSE LIKE IN MY TOWN, AND MAKE
30,000 WITH ZERO
RISK."

That single flip is why real estate agent Chris Wolfe got his license. Two years later he had rebuilt a business from nothing, in a market where he knew nobody.

95 PERCENT OF HIS FIRST YEAR CAME FROM TWO FREE THINGS.

Chris Wolfe moved to El Dorado Hills, California with no sphere of influence and no past clients to call. Ninety five percent of his 32 to 33 deals that first year came from just two sources, split about 50/50: cold calling expired listings and for-sale-by-owners, and hosting open houses. He says plainly that he hated the cold calling part, and did it anyway. "It was that ingredient of desperation," he told D.J. on the podcast. "I need now business." Desperation is not a strategy anyone recommends. The two activities it pushed him into are the strategy, and they cost nothing but time.

WHAT BUILT THE FIRST $510,000, IN ORDER:

- 1 Cold call expired listings and for-sale-by-owners, and circle prospect around them.
He
- 2 memorized scripts and still found it hard. He made the calls anyway, every day.
- 3 Host open houses on a regular cadence, including the slow season.
He started in winter,
- 4 hauling signs through the rain. It was the fastest way to meet people already in the market.
- 5 Know your own split.
He can name the exact ratio, about 50/50 between the two sources,
- 6 because he tracked it. You cannot double down on what you have not measured.
- 7 Put your daily non-negotiables in a system you check every morning.
He started on a paper
- 8 checklist and later built it into software, Activate Daily, because seeing the boxes get
- 9 checked kept him consistent on the days motivation did not show up.

THE TAKEAWAY

HE DOUBLED IT.
$510,000 BECAME $1
MILLION IN NET
COMMISSION, 40
TRANSACTIONS,
SAME TWO LEAD
SOURCES.

The business that collapsed in 2022 is not the one that opened in a new market with nothing. That one just got started.

D.J. Paris

Keeping It Real Podcast

KEEPING IT REAL

keepingitrealpod.com