

KALE REALTY

HE FROZE ON THE PROPERTY TAXES.

A buyer asked one basic question standing in the kitchen. That was the day the deal ended, and he hadn't even shown the rest of the house.

"WHAT ARE THE
TAXES ON THIS HOUSE? LET ME
GET BACK TO YOU."

The buyer already knew the answer before asking.
He was testing whether the agent standing in front of him did too.

LOCAL KNOWLEDGE IS WHAT TURNS INTO REFERRALS, YEARS LATER.

The median REALTOR gets 28 percent of their business from repeat clients, up from 20 percent the year before, per the NAR 2026 Member Profile. Agents with 16 or more years in the business get 49 percent from repeat clients and another 32 percent from referrals. That reputation is built one answered question at a time. A buyer who has to wait on a callback for the property taxes remembers it, and five years from now, when a friend asks who to call, they don't call the agent who had to check.

BUILD THIS BEFORE YOUR NEXT LISTING APPOINTMENT IN A NEW AREA:

- 1 One page per neighborhood, answerable without reaching for your phone.
Price per square
- 2 foot, days on market, and the property tax reassessment cycle.
- 3 Know the boundaries before you're asked.
School boundaries, permit-parking zones, and the
- 4 transfer-tax stack for that specific town or ward.
- 5 Ask three people who already live there what they complain about.
That's the detail a
- 6 buyer actually wants, and it's the one no data sheet gives you.

THE TAKEAWAY

BEFORE YOUR NEXT
SHOWING, WRITE DOWN THE
ANSWER TO THE
ONE QUESTION
YOU DODGED LAST TIME.

That page is the difference between a one-time client and the referral that finds you five years from now.
