D.J. PARIS

YOUR LISTING PHOTOS AREN'T SHOWING THE WHOLE HOUSE.

Buyers are guessing the layout, and most of them say that matters.

IF A BUYER CAN'T PICTURE HOW THE ROOMS CONNECT, THEY SKIP THE HOUSE.

Photos show rooms. They don't show how the rooms connect to each other.

FLOOR PLANS BEAT ALMOST EVERYTHING ELSE ON YOUR LISTING.

NAR's 2025 Profile of Home Buyers and Sellers asked online buyers to rate how useful different listing features were. Photos ranked highest, at 81 percent. Detailed property information came next, at 77 percent. Floor plans came third, at 57 percent, ahead of the agent's own contact information and virtual tours. Most listings skip the one feature buyers rank third.

ADD THIS TO EVERY LISTING BEFORE IT GOES LIVE:

1 Book the floor plan in the same visit as the photos.

One appointment, not a second trip.

2 Ask for room sizes on the plan.

A buyer judging the layout wants to know if the furniture fits.

3 Put it second in the photo order, right after the front of the house.

Buyers who click past the first photo are already judging the layout.

4 Print it for every showing.

A buyer walking the rooms in person still wants the plan in their hand.

THE TAKEAWAY

PULL UP YOUR NEXT LISTING AND CHECK THE PHOTO ORDER FOR A FLOOR PLAN.

If it's not there, that's the first call to make today.
