

KALE REALTY

6.9%. HIGHEST IN THE NATION.

Chicago just posted the biggest annual home-price gain of any major U.S. market.

“

CHICAGO IS OUTPACING THE
NATIONAL MARKET
BY MORE THAN THREE TO ONE.

The national composite is up 2.1 percent this year.
Chicago is up 6.9.

EVERY SELLER WHO THINKS THE MARKET SLOWED DOWN IS READING THE WRONG HEADLINE.

The S&P Cotality Case-Shiller Index's June 2026 report, released August 25, put Chicago's year-over-year gain at 6.9 percent, the highest of the 20 tracked metro areas and more than three times the 20-city composite's 2.1 percent gain, ahead of second-place New York at 4.8 and third-place Cleveland at 4.1. The national story sellers are reading describes a market at its slowest pace in a decade. Chicago's own line in that same report tells a different one, and it's the number the agent in the room usually has, and the seller usually doesn't.

WHAT TO SAY AT THIS MONTH'S LISTING APPOINTMENTS:

- 1 Open with the composite, then the local number.

"The national market grew 2.1 percent this year. Chicago grew 6.9." The gap does the work.
- 2 Use it against "the market is slow."

That belief comes from a national headline. Chicago's own Case-Shiller number says otherwise.
- 3 Bring it to the price conversation, not just the pitch.

A seller weighing a price cut needs the same number as a seller deciding whether to list at all.

THE TAKEAWAY

THE MARKET ISN'T SLOW. THE HEADLINE IS NATIONAL.

Chicago's number is the one your seller hasn't seen yet.
