

KEEPING IT REAL

MOST AGENTS NEVER FOLLOW UP. SHE ALWAYS DOES.

A Colorado luxury producer who sold half a billion dollars without ever making a cold call.

D.J. Paris
Keeping It Real Podcast

KEEPING IT REAL

keepingitrealpod.com

“

"I WOULD RATHER LICK A CAT'S
VOMIT THAN EVER
COLD CALL."

Gwen Snyder, Liv Sotheby's International Realty, Greenwood Village, Colorado. Half a billion dollars in Colorado luxury, referral only.

THE REFERRAL BUSINESS ISN'T A PERSONALITY. IT'S A PROCESS.

Gwen says most agents, 85 percent by her own count, never follow up with a client after the closing. She follows up with every one. That single gap, she says, is why her business runs entirely on referrals and she has never had to make a cold call.

GWEN'S FOLLOW-UP SYSTEM, FOUR PIECES:

- 1 Send 50 to 100 "just sold" postcards to the whole neighborhood after every closing.
Not just the buyer or seller. The block that watched it happen.
- 2 Solve the problem before the client asks.
Gwen calls it being a concierge REALTOR. "Doing most and more is what you got to do."
- 3 Meet 60 new people a year, one a week.
Coffee, breakfast, lunch. Not a pitch, just a relationship added to the list.
- 4 Add every past client to your CRM and follow up, especially after they've moved in.
That's the step Gwen says most agents skip.

THE TAKEAWAY

PICK ONE PAST CLIENT TODAY. FOLLOW UP.

That's the whole gap between a referral business and a cold-calling one.