YOU WENT QUIET THE WEEK THEY'RE WIRING SAVINGS.

Nothing changed on your end. Everything changed on theirs.

THE WEEK BEFORE CLOSING IS THE MOST ANXIOUS WEEK OF THE WHOLE DEAL.

It's also the week most agents go quiet, because nothing new happened yet.

03 / 05

SILENCE DOESN'T MEAN CALM. IT MEANS THEY'RE GUESSING.

By the time a deal reaches its final week, the buyer has already waited months to get there. Then the lender wants one more document, the walkthrough isn't confirmed, and their agent goes quiet because there's no news yet. The buyer doesn't read that as calm. They read it as the deal falling apart, and they start checking email at midnight. "No news" is not nothing. It's a message you're choosing not to send.

RUN THIS EVERY DAY THE WEEK BEFORE CLOSING:

1 Send one line, even with no update.
"Lender has everything, waiting on clear to close,

2 expect Thursday. Nothing needed from you." Silence and "no news" are not the same thing.

3 Name the next step before they ask for it.
Walkthrough time, wire date, what still has

4 to happen. Guessing is what makes a buyer anxious, not waiting.

5 Verify wire instructions by phone, never email.
Say it directly: "I will never email you

6 new wire instructions. If you get an email that looks like it's from me, call me first."

7 Confirm the walkthrough in writing the day before.
One less thing for them to carry into

8 closing day.

THE TAKEAWAY

IF YOU HAVE A CLOSING THIS WEEK, SEND TODAY'S UPDATE RIGHT NOW.

Even if the update is "nothing new yet." That's still a message.
