YOU JUST GOT THE "ANOTHER OFFER IS COMING IN" TEXT. HERE'S WHAT IT ACTUALLY MEANS.

Sometimes it's true. Sometimes it's the only move an agent has left.

THAT'S NOT A TACTIC. IT'S A CODE VIOLATION.

NAR's Code of Ethics, Article 2, bars agents from exaggeration, misrepresentation, or concealment of pertinent facts related to a property or a transaction. Standard of Practice 1-15 says an agent may disclose that a real offer exists, and only with the seller's approval. Neither article leaves room for inventing one that isn't there. Saying it to speed up a buyer isn't hustle. It's the exact behavior those two rules exist to stop.

WHAT TO SAY INSTEAD OF THE BLUFF:

1 "I can't disclose other offers without my seller's approval."
True, defensible, and it still signals real interest without inventing anything.

2 Give a real deadline, not a manufactured one.
"All offers are due Thursday at 5pm" only works as urgency if your seller actually set that date.

3 Be ready to produce what you claim.
If a buyer's agent asks to see the other offer and you can't show one, you've already answered their question.

THE TAKEAWAY

SAY IT STRAIGHT. REAL OFFER, OR NONE AT ALL.

The bluff risks your license. The truth only risks the sale.
