

KALE REALTY

YOU TRAINED THEM TO SCREEN YOUR CALLS.

Every call was an ask. They noticed before you did.

“

IF EVERY CALL IS AN ASK, PEOPLE
STOP PICKING UP.

Past clients don't drift away on their own. Agents train them to go quiet first.

YOU DIDN'T LOSE THEM. YOU TAUGHT THEM WHAT YOUR NAME MEANS.

Call a past client only when you want a referral or a listing, and their phone learns your pattern faster than you do. They see your name, they know what's coming, and they let it ring. The fix isn't calling less. It's changing the ratio. Three calls that hand them something, for every one call that asks them for something. Give first, long enough that your name stops meaning "here it comes."

RUN THIS RATIO BEFORE YOU ASK FOR ANYTHING:

- 1 Call with something useful, three times.
A nearby sale, a tax deadline, a contractor
- 2 worth using. No ask attached to any of them.
- 3 Open differently.
Skip "how's the market." Ask about the thing you actually know about
- 4 them.
- 5 Say "no strings" out loud.
"A house on your street just sold. Want me to send you what it
- 6 went for? No strings. I just thought you'd want to know."
- 7 Then ask once.
Clearly, and stop there.

THE TAKEAWAY

PICK THREE PAST
CLIENTS TONIGHT.
CALL WITH SOMETHING
USEFUL, NOT AN ASK.

Give three times, then ask once. That's the whole ratio.
