A Kansas City agent grew her business 74% a year for five years doing it anyway.

THE REASON IT WORKS ISN'T THE GIFT. IT'S THE DOORSTEP.

Rachel Kilmer's growth didn't come from a tool or a paid lead. It came from pop-bys, a small gift hand-delivered to a past client with no ask attached. Coffee on the way to a showing. A pumpkin on a porch in October. Most agents dropped this the moment an email blast could fake the gesture. It still works precisely because an email can't fake it. Showing up at someone's door is the one marketing move that takes real effort, which is exactly why it's rare now.
